STORY OF AN ELEPHANT. some year ago a trained elephant in Travancore, whose keeper was accustomed to call daily at an arrack-shop in passing. giving the elephant a little of the spirits each time, both being "lound of a drop." One day the beast was refractory, and the keeper. much displeased, threatened that he would stop his allowance of arrack. Shortly afterward, calling at the shop as usual, he brought out the arrack in a dish, drauk the whole before the eyes of the animal, and returned the yossel. The elephant, highly incansed. struck the keeper with his trunk, but so heavy was the blow that the man was killed on the spot.
